Introduction

This book is a concise reference to grammar for people who are learning the spoken arabic of Egypt. It is intended to be used alongside other study aids available free of charge in various formats at www.lisaanmasry.org. These include over 1,500 example sentences with detailed explanations of the meanings, and recordings of all examples and words

Getting started

This document is made up of three main sections:

- essentials an introduction to grammatical terms and to Egyptian arabic, pointing out the similarities and differences between Egyptian and English
- grammar a description of how to build sentences using the standard language elements
- usage commonly used words, phrases and expressions

If you just want to learn a few useful phrases like "Hello" and "How are you?", you can skip to the Courtesies chapter, however it will make a lot more sense to you if you read the earlier chapters first.

A word about arabic writing

It is not difficult to learn to read and write in arabic, but it is an additional barrier to learning. You are unlikely ever to see Egyptian Arabic in print: notices, packaging, adverts, web sites etc are written in Modern Standard Arabic. And if you want to read Arabic handwriting, that's a different ballgame altogether. An understanding of the Arabic alphabet can, therefore, be useful, but it is by no means essential.

The examples in this book appear in arabic writing and also in european writing as they would be pronounced by and English person.

The essentials

In many cases, Egyptian uses the same structure as English: let's first look at some simple examples where the structure is similar, then move on to the differences.

Nouns and verbs

Here is a simple sentence in both English and Egyptian:

Element	English	Egyptian
subject noun	Ahmed	'ah mad عمـ َ د	j
verb	loves	biyi hibb "ـــِـــِـــ	ب object noun	Sarah	saara مارة	נג

In both the English and Egyptian examples, there are three words: two words are nouns (people, things or ideas) and the middle word is a verb, which explains what is happening. In both cases, the noun before the verb (Ahmed) is the subject (the person or thing that is doing something) and the noun after the verb (Sarah) is the object- is the person or thing that is having something done to it.

We can change the meaning by turning the words around, like this:

Element	English	Egyptian
subject noun	Sarah	saa ra	سار آة
verb	loves	bi ti hibb	ب ِ ح بِ
object noun	Ahmed	'ahmad	أحم_َد

The nouns do not change, they have just moved: we know from the order of the words that Sarah is now the subject- the one who is loving, and Ahmed is now the object, the one who is loved. In English, the verb does not change at all, but in Egyptian it changes a little because the subject is now female, not male. We will look in more detail at how exactly verbs change to match the subject later, in the section on verbs.

Subject and Object

The subject and object can be a proper noun- a name that begins with a capital letter- like Sarah, Ahmed, London, but there are some other possiblities as well. Here are some examples:

Element	English	Egy	yptian
proper noun	Sarah	saa ra	سار آة
noun (specific)	the man	il raa gil	ا ِلرا َجـِل
	the woman	il sitt	ا_لس_تِت
	the cat	il 'uT Ta	ا_لقــُطـــة
	the idea	il fik ra	ا ِلف ِكر آة
noun(general)	a man	raag il	را َجـِل
	a woman	sitt	س_ِت
	a cat	'uT Ta	قــُطــّـــَة
	an idea	fik ra	ف_ِكر َة
noun(quantity)	some men	sh w yit riga laat	شويـية رجا لا ة
	five men	Kamas rigaala	خــمـيس ر جا لا
	any man	'ai raagil	أي را َجـِل pronoun(subject)	he	hu w wa	هـ ـ ـو
	she	hi ya	- هـ ـ ي pronoun(object)	him	-uh	ه
	her	- ha	-la

Determiners

Determiners help to identify the specific, the kind or the quantity of something that you are talking about. In English, determiners are words like the, a, some and his.

The Egyptian word il- - corresponds to the in English, but there is no equivalent to 'a'. The noun just appears on its own.

Note that adding il- 1 to a word affects the pronunciation if it begins with a sun letter.

Pronouns

Pronouns are the short words like I and they that often replace nouns in spoken English and Egyptian, to make our speech clearer and more concise. Here is a simple example:

Element	English	Egyptian
subject pronoun	I	'a na آناً
verb	love	بــَحــِب ّ ba hibb
object pronoun	her	-a ha آھ

We can see that the subject is still at the start of the sentence and the object is still at the end of the sentence, but in Egyptian the object pronoun is attached to the end of the verb. Let's turn that round and see what happens:

Element	English	Eg	yptian
subject pronoun	she	hi ya	- هـ ـِ ي
verb	loves	biti hibb	بيتيحيب
object pronoun	me	- ni	ني

Woa, what happened there? Everything changed, in both English and Egyptian! The reason is that, in both languages, there are different forms of the pronoun for subject and object. There is a third form of the pronoun that indicates ownership (mine/his/yours/theirs/its) but we will save that until we cover pronouns in more detail. For now, let's just look at the subject and object pronouns. Remember that object pronouns are attached to the end of the verb.

	Subject		Object
English	Egypt	tian	English	Egyptian
I	'a na	أنا	me	- ni	ني
we	'ih na	إحنا	us	- na	نا
you(m)	'in ta	إنت	you(m)	-ak	اك
you(f)	'in ti	إنت_	you(f)	-ik	لك
you(pl)	'in tu	إنتوا	you(pl)	- u kw	_ . کو
he/it(m)	hu w wa	ه ـ و	him/it(m)	-uh	ه
she/it(f)	hi ya	- هــِي	her/it(f)	- ha	لها
they	hum ma	هــُمْ	them	- u hum م	_

Here are a few more examples:

English	Egyptian
I know him	'a na Aar fuh	أ نا ً عا ر ف مه
Ahmed knows him	'ah mad Aarf uh	أحمـد عا ر ف مه
Sarah knows him	saa ra Aar fi t uh	سار آة عا ر فيت م
I smoke cigarettes	'a na bash rab sa gaa yar	أ نا ً با آشر آب سـآجا آيـآر
I write books	'a na bak tib ku toob	أ نا ً با كتــِب كــُتوب
Ahmed writes books	'ah mad bi yik tib ku toob	أحمرَد برِيرِكترِب كرُتوب
he writes books	hu w wa bi yik tib ku toob	هــُو" - بــِيــِكتــِب كــُتوب

Note that, in Egyptian, the subject pronoun can be omitted if the meaning is still clear:

English	Egyptian
I know him	'a na Aar fuh	أ نا ً عا ر ف م
I KNOW HITH	Aar f uh	عآر ف م
Do you (m) know him	hu w wa 'inta Aar fuh?	هـُو" - إنت عا ر ف مه؟
Do you (m) know him	hu w wa Aar fuh?	هـُو " عا ر ف مه؟

There is no 'is'

The word is/am/are is one of the most commonly use verbs in English.... but, if you are talking about something now (not the past or future), there is no word in Egyptian for 'is'. That's quite a big difference, but it's not too difficult. Let's take a look at some examples:

English	Egyptian
I am tired	'a na taA baan	أنا تـيعبا ن
Ahmed is Egyptian	'ah mad maS ri	أحمـ َد مـ َصري
the cats are in the garden	il 'u TaT fi ilgi nee na	ا لِقُطُطَ في الحِنينَة
Sarah is available	saara mawgooda	سار آة مــوجود آة
today is Friday	ilna har da il gum Aa	الِنـَها رَد آة الِجـُمعــَة
this is my wife	di mi raa ti	دي ميرا تي
my husband is at home	goozi fi il biyt	جوزي في الِبيِيت

When you are talking about a past or future situation, the Egyptian words kaan ن ن - was and haykoon مريكون - will be are used. This will be covered in more detail later under verbs. Here are some simple examples:

English	Egyptia	an
I am tired	'a na taA baan	أنا تـ عبا ن
Ahmed is tired	'ah mad taA baan	أحمرد ترعبا ن
I was tired	'a na kunt taA baan	أنا َ كــُنْت تــَعبا َن
Ahmed was tired	'ah mad kaan taA baan	أحمرَد كا أن ترَعبا أن
I will be tired	'a na ha koon taA baan	أنا َ هـــكون تـــَعبا َن
Ahmed will be tired	'ah mad hayikoon taA baan	أحمرَد هرَيبِكون ترَعبا ن

There is no 'have'

The verb have is widely used in English, but there is no equivalent verb in Egyptian. Have is used in many ways in English, and in Egyptian a different word is used for each meaning... and none of them are verbs.

Meaning	English	Egyp	tian
have with me	I have matches	ma Aa ya kab reet	مـــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــ
own	I have a house	Aan di biyt	عــِند ي بــِيت
must	I have to go	laazim 'aruwh	لآز م أر وُح
eat, etc	I will have dinner (I will dine)	hat Aash sha	هــَتعــَشــّا
take	I will have a nap (I will take a nap)	haa Kuz taA see la	ها َخــُدْ تــَعسيلــَة

Masculine, feminine, plural

Like many european languages, all Egyptian nouns are either masculine or feminine. Here are some examples:

Gender	English	Ar	abic
	book	ki taab	كيِتا َب dog	kalb	ک_َلب
	man	raa gil	راَجلِ
masculine	house	biyt	بييت
	milk	la ban	ل_َب_َن
	peace	sa laam	ســـَـلا مَ teacher	mu dar ris	مـيُد - ر" س
	teacher	mudar ri sa	مــُد رَ ّ ِســَة
	idea	fik ra	فـِکر ۔َة
	table	tara bee za	تــرا َبيز َة workshop	war sha	و رشــيَة
feminine	woman	sitt	ســِت
	daughter girl	bint	بـاِنت
	fire	naar	نار
	head	raas	راس

As you can see, the majority of feminine nouns end in -a -. There are a few exceptions though: some are obvious, like woman and daughter, but others, you just need to learn them. We will cover this in more detail in the section on nouns.

In both English and Egyptian, the majority of nouns have singular and plural forms: in Egyptian, a very small number of plural nouns are also divided by gender (masculine and feminine). Here are some examples of plurals:

English			rabic
Singular	Plural	Singula	ar	Pl	ural book	books	ki taab	کـِتا َب	ku tub	ک_ُتــُب
dog	dogs	kalb	ک_َلب	ki laab	كـِلا َب
man	men	raa gil	را َجـِل	rig gaa la	رِجِيّا َلاَ child	children	Tifl	ط_فل	'aT faal	أطفاك
house	houses	biyt	بيِت	bu yoot	بــــيُوت
milk		la ban	لـَب َن
peace		sa laam	ســـَلا مَ teacher(m)	teachers	س mu dar ris	مـدُ رَّ سِ	mudarri seen	مــُد ر " سين teacher(f)	teachers	س_َة mudar ri sa	مـد ر ً ر	mudarri saat	مــُد رَ سِسا ت
idea	ideas	fik ra	فـِکر ۃ	'af kaar	أفكار
table	tables	tara bee za s	تـرا َبيز َ	tarabee zaat	تـرا بيزات
workshop	workshops	war sha	و َرشــَة	wi rash	و_ر ش woman	women	sitt	س_ِت	sat taat	س_تيّا ت
fire	fires	naar	نار	nee raan	نیراًن

In English, the majority of plural nouns are the same as the singular, with a suffix of -s for example book/books, but there are a small number of words with unusual plurals, for example man/men and child/children. In Egyptian, feminine nouns that end in -a - usually have a very straightforward plural- -aat - L. Plurals of masculine nouns vary quite a lot- the vowels move about a bit but the consonants remain the same. You will need to learn them.

Note that, both in English and Egyptian, some words do not have a plural- for example milk and peace.

Adjectives

Adjectives are words that describe something- for example, good or small. In English, adjectives do not change, but in Egyptian there are different forms of an adjective for masculine, feminine and plural. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
he is tired	hu w wa taA baan	هــُو " - تــَعبا اَن
she is tired	hi ya taA baa n a	هـِي َ تــَعبا َن ۖ ق
they are tired	hum ma taAba neen	هــُـم ّ تــَـعبا ني ن
he is good	hu w wa ku wa yis	هـُو " كـُو بَيِس
she is good	hi ya kuwa yi s a	هـِي َ كـُو َيـِس َة
they are good	hum ma kuwayi seen	هــُمْ كــُو بَــِس ين

The good news is that the majority of adjectives require just a different ending for feminine- -a عن forms. We will cover this in more detail in the section on adjectives.

Adverbs

Just as adjectives describe a noun, adverbs say something about a verb - where, when, how often, how much etc. They can also be used to describe the extent of an adjective (very good) or even another adverb (very slowly). Many English adverbs end with -ly. Usage of adverbs is very similar in English and Egyptian, though adverbs usually go after adjectives: here are some examples

describing	English	Egyptian
verb	I will come back soon	'a na hargaA baAd shuwaya اُنا َ هـرَجـع بـاَعد شــُو اَيـاَة
verb	Ahmed walks quickly	'ah mad bi yim shi bisuraAa أحمرَد بـيِــِمشي بـيِســُر عَــَة
adjective	Ahmed is extremely clever	'ah mad shaa Tir giddan أحم َد شا طَرِ جِرِد "ا
adverb	Ahmed drives reasonably fast	ah mad biyi soo' bisu ra Aa maA'oola' أحمـَد بـرِيــِسوق بـرِسـرُر َعــَة مـاَعقولـاَ

Prepositions

In English, prepositions link an additional noun to a verb. This is possible in Egyptian, but prepositions are also commonly used in place of verbs, for example have is usually expressed using the prepositions Aand (own) and maAa (have with you): see ownership for more information. Here are some examples of prepositions:

English	Egyptian	English	Egyptian
after	baAd ب_َعد	she came after dinner	hi ya gaat baAd il Aa sha' هـِي َ جا َت بـ َعد ا لِعـ َشا َ ع
behind	wara و را	the garden is behind the house	ilgi nee na wa ra il biyt الِجينِينَةُ وَ أَرَا اللِيتَ
have	Aand عــَند	I have a house in Cairo	Aandi biyt fi il'ahra عَـنَدي بـيِت في الِقا هَـِر َة
there is	fi في	there is water	fi ma yaat في مــَيا َة

Conjunctions

A conjunction joins two clauses to make a much more complex sentence. Here is an example:

I want to make bread but I don't have enough flour Aaayiz 'aAamil Aiysh lakin maAandeesh di'ee' kifaaya عاَيـز أعـيَمـل عـيش لـكَـن مـعَـنديش د قيق كـفا يَــة

Part	English	Egyptian
Main clause	I want to make bread	Aaa yiz 'aAa mil Aiysh عاَ يـِز أعـَمـِل عـِيش
Conjunction	but	laa kin لاَ كـيِن
Second clause	I don't have enough flour	maAan deesh di 'ee' ki faa ya مـيَعـيَنديش د ِقيق كـيِفا َيـيَة

In English, the same word is often used for a preposition and a conjunction, but in Egyptian it may be different. Sometimes it is only necessary to add the word ma be to convert a preposition to a conjunction.

Element	English	Egyptian
preposition (dinner is a noun)	wash your hands before dinner	' iG sil iee deek ' abl il Aa sha' إغسـلِ اللهِيكِ قَـلِل اللهِيَشا ع conjunction (you eat is a clause- it contains a verb)	wash your hands before you eat	'iG sil iee deek ' abl ma taa kul اغسیل ۱ یدیك قیبل ما تا کـُـُل

Nouns

A noun represents a person, thing or concept. Here are some examples:

Туре	English	Aral	bic
person	Ahmed	'ahmad	أحم_َد
person	man	raa gil	را َجـلِ person	player	laa Aib	لأعيب
thing	leather	gild	جيِلا
concept	wisdom	hik ma	حـِکمــَة
concept	appointment	mee Aaad	ميعاد

Masculine and feminine

In arabic, nouns can be masculine or feminine. This does not necessarily mean that they belong to male and female persons. Most words that end with -a -a are feminine. Egyptian spelling is somewhat whimsical: some people use -ah -a at the end of feminine words.

In addition, there are a small number of words that do not end in -a - that are also feminine. Some of these words are obvious: others less so. Here are some examples of feminine nouns:

Feminine nouns
English	Ara	Arabic
idea	fik ra	فـِکر ۃ
woman	sitt	س_ِت
daughter	bint	بـاِنت
fire	naar	نار
head	raas	راس
leg	rigl	ر_جل
ear	widn	و ِدن
France and all other countries	fa ran sa	فـَر َنسا
Tunis and some other cities	Too nis	طون ٍ س

Plurals

If there is more than one of something, the noun becomes a plural. For the majority of English words, we make a small change to the ending - book/books, story/stories: there are a few exceptions, for example child/children. The same is true in Egyptian: for many nouns, only the ending changes, though for quite a few the volwels move around within the word. Here are some of the simple ones:

Gender	End	ding	Singular		Plural
masculine	-yn	ین	mu haa sib	مــُحا َســِب	muhas been	مــُحا سَـِبِين
feminine	-aat	ـا ّت	mu has b a	مــُحا َسب ۖ ق	muhas baat	مــُحا سَــِبا ت

For the majority of masculine nouns and for a few feminine nouns, the plural is formed by rearranging the vowels- usually converting short vowels for long: it's probably easiest just to remember the plural when you learn a new word, rather than trying to work out the rules. Here are some examples:

English	Singular		Plu	ral
man	raa gil	را َجـلِ	ri gae la	رِجا َلاَ
dog	kalb	کــَا ب	ki laeb	كـِلا َب fingernail	Dufr	ضــُفر	ر Da wae fir	ضـــوا َفــِ
book	ki taeb	کـِتا َب	ku tub	ۮ ۫ؾ ؙؚٮ story	QiS Sa	قـِصـــــة	Qi SaS	قـِصــَص
king	ma lik	م_َلـإِك	mu look	مـُلوك
type	Sanf	صــاَنف	'aS naaf	أصناك
broker	sim saar	ســِمسا ر	sa mas ra ö	سـيَمـيَسر

A very small number of nouns have a different plural when you are talking about between 3 and 10 of them. These are:

English	Singular		Plural
day	yoom	يوم	ti yaem	تيِيا َم
month	shahr	شــــــهر	tush hoor	تــُشهور person	na far	ن_َف_َر	tin faar	تـينفا ر
plate	Taba'	طــــــق	tiT baa'	تـِطبا ًق
thousand	'alf	ألف	ta laaf	تـَلا َف

Occupations

Generally speaking, the plural for trades ends with either -yn عن or -aya مـــــــــــ, but for professions there are different endings for men -yn عن and women -aat مــــــــــــــــ.

English	Singular		Plural
carpenter	nag gaar	نــَجـّا ر	nagga reen	نــَجـّا ر ين
greengrocer	Ku Da ri	خـُضـرَي	KuDari yya	خــُضــرَ عِ يـــة
male teacher	mu dar ris	مـيُّد َر ّ ِس	mudarri seen	مــُّد َ ر ّ _س ين
female teacher	mudar ri s a	مــُد َر ّ ِس ۖ ۃ	mudarri saat	مـُد رَّ سِا تَ

Collective nouns and mass nouns

In English, deer can mean one deer or several: the latter is described as a collective noun. In Egyptian, many foods- and some other things- are usually referred to using a collective noun. You can talk about one item, for example one fish, by adding -a — ending:

English	collective		one
eggs	biyD	ب_ِيض	biy D a	ب_ِيض -ة
fish	sa mak	ســَمــَك	sa ma k a	س_م_ك ح
flies	dib baan	د ِبِیّا ن	dib baa n a	د ِب ّ ا اَن آة

In English, items that you can't easily count, like sugar and cheese, are referred to using a mass noun. In Egyptian, a collective noun is used, and you can refer to a tiny amount of it by adding thea ـــ ending, for example flour is diQeeQ د قِفَــ and a grain of flour is diQeeQa.

Many materials- things that can be used to make something from, like leather or cloth, are treated in the same way: you add -a -- to give the meaning a piece of...

English	collective		ар	iece
wood	Kashab ,	خــَشــَب	Ka sha b a	خــَشــَب ۖ ۃ
soap	Sa boon	صا َبون	Sa boo n a	صا َبون آ

Pairs

The Egyptian word for shoes (gazma جَـٰدَه) relates to a pair. For a single shoe, it is necessary to say fardit gazma فَـرَد ة جـَزَمــة. Note that Egyptians do not consider trousers to be a pair. Here are some examples of words that work like this:

English	Egyptian
shoes	gaz ma	 جــَزمــَ ة
socks	sha raab	شـرا ب
gloves	gu wan ti	جـُوا َنتي

Duals

If you want to talk about two people, or specify a quantity of two, see the section on two in numbers.

If you want to talk about two things (not people or quantities), you should use the dual suffix -yn. This is equivalent to a couple which can mean exactly two, or approximately two. There are slightly different forms for feminine nouns and words ending in -i. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian	Suffix	English	Egyptian
book (m)	كـِتا َبِ ki taab	-yn ين	two books	kita been کـِتا َبین
chair (ends with y)	کــُرسي kur si	- ییب ن -i y yin	two chairs	کــُرســِييــِنkursiyyin minute (f)	د ِقیقــَة di 'ee 'a	- teen	a couple of minutes	د ِق ِقتین di'i' teen

Genitive form

The genitive is used to express ownership. In English, the most common way is to put an apostrophe-s on the end of the owned noun, for example John's house. It is similar in Egyptian. For masculine nouns, the ending does not change: for feminine nouns that end with -a -, the ending changes to -it -which is written the same but the t-marbuta at the end is pronounced as a t.

English	Egyptian
Ahmed's book	ki taab 'ah mad	كيِتا ب أحميَد
the book's cover	Gu laef ilki taeb	غيُلا ف الكيتا ب
Sarah's toy	liA bit sa ra	ليعبية سير ة

You can also express the genitive using the word of. For example, you could say the house of John, although the 's form is usually preferred when expressing ownership. of can also be used to express a quantity or a package of something: the genitive is also used in Egyptian.

English	Egyptian
a bottle of water	'iz za zit ma y yah	إز " ز ق م آيي آه
a kilo of potatoes	keelw baTaaTiS	كيلو بــَطا طـِص
a pack of cigarettes	ba kw seegaayar	باكو سيجا يـر
a box of matches	Ail bit kab reet	عـِلبـِة كـَبريت

Possessive suffixes

In English, you can also express ownership with a possessive determiner, for example my, your, his. In Egyptian, you add a possessive suffix to the end of the owned noun. When you add a suffix to a feminine noun, the -a -i - is converted to a -it - j -, both in writing and speech. Here are some examples:

English	on its own		with	pronoun
his book	ki taab	کـِتا َب	ki taa b uh	كـِتا بُ
my wife	does not ex	ist on its own	mi raa t i	ميرا تي
your(m) idea	fik ra	فـِکر ۔َة	fik ri t ak	ف ـ کر ِت َ ك

See determiners for more information about possessive suffixes, and ownership for information about other methods of expressing ownership.

Compound nouns

You can describe a noun using another noun, for example to say what material it is made from. The qualifying noun is placed after the main noun, and is always singular. If the main noun is preceded by iI- -1 the qualifying noun is also preceded by iI- -1. Note that adding iI- -1 to a word affects the pronunciation if it begins with a sun letter.

English		Arabic

Pronouns

Pronouns are short words that are used to replace nouns in spoken English and Arabic. They are used when both the speaker and listener know what noun they represent, for example if the noun has already been used in an earlier sentence. This makes our speech clearer and more concise. In this example, Ahmed and dog are the nouns and He and it are pronouns:

There are four main groups of pronoun:

- personal pronouns I, me, mine, he, him, his etc
- · demonstrative pronouns this, that
- · indefinite pronouns somebody, anywhere
- · relative pronouns who, which, that

Personal pronouns

In English, there are four versions of the personal pronoun (he, him, his, himself): in Egyptian, there is an additional version (to him).

English	Egyptian		Form
I, he	hu w wa	ھ_و ھ_و	subject
me, him	-uh	مْ	object
to me, to him	- luh	لــُـه	indirect object
mine	milk-i	مـِلکـي	posessive
myself, himself	naf suh _a	نــَفســُ	reflexive

In Egyptian, there are separate forms of you for masculine, feminine and plural, but there is no neuter (it): instead, it is necessary to use the he or she form, depending on the gender of the noun.

Subject pronouns

A subject is the noun that appears before the verb- the person or thing that is doing something.

ا like to read 'ana baahib 'aktib انا َ با َحــب أكتــب The subject pronouns are:

Personal pronouns are not needed with perfect and x-imperfect verbs, as it is clear from the verb, but it is common to use them, especially for emphasis. They are often used with participles to make it clearer who is the subject.

Pronoun suffixes

You can attach a pronoun as a suffix to a verb, preposition or conjunction. It is normally an object pronoun (me, him) when attached to a verb and a subject pronoun (I, he) when attached to a preposition or conjunction.

Element	English	Egyp	tian
verb object	I love her	'a na baahib b aha	أنا َ با حــِب ۗ هـ
preposition subject	Do you have a lighter?	maA ak wa lae Aa?	مــَع كو لا عــَة؟ conjunction subject	I think that you are wrong	'a na 'af ti kir 'in nak Gal tan	أنا أفت كير إن ك غيلتا

The pronoun suffixes are:

English	Suffix
me	-i	-
us	- na	-ن
You(m)	-ak	اك
You(f)	-ik	ك
You(pl)	- kum	کـُم
Him/it(m)	-u	ع -
Her/it(f)	- ha	-le
Them	- hum	ھـُم

Possessive pronoun

Words like mine and hers are possessive pronouns: they are used on their own to represent something that you own. They are similar to possessive determiners, which are used together with the noun they represent, for example my book. In Egyptian arabic, the equivalent of a possessive pronoun is formed by adding a possessive suffix to the owning-word milk.

Reflexive pronouns (myself, yourself, himself)

Reflexive pronouns can be used after a noun or a verb. They are formed by adding a possessive suffix to the self-word nafs نــَفُس.

English	Egyptian
I can look after myself	haa Kud baa li min naf si	ها خــُد با لي مـين نــيفسي
The man himself	il raag il naf suh	الِرا جَالِ نَافِسُهُ
He did it by himself	hu w wa Aaa mal ha bi naf suh	هـُو" َ عا مَله آبينَفسـُ

Demonstrative pronouns

These are the words that you use when you want to point at something.

English	Egyptian
this (man)	dah	دَه
this (woman, thing)	di	دي
those (men)	dool	دول
those (women,things)	deeh	دیه

If you want to use one of these together with a noun, rather than to replace the noun, for example this book, you would use a demonstrative determiner in English and a demonstrative adjective in Egyptian.

Element	English	Egy	ptian
noun	how much is the book ?	bi kaam ilkitaab?	ب_ِکا َم ا ِلک_تا َب ؟ pronoun	how much is this?	bi kaam dah?	ب_ِکا َم د َہ ؟
adjective	how much is this book?	bi kaam ilki taab dah	بيكام الكيتاب،

Indefinite pronouns

These are words like anybody, something etc. In Egyptian, these are made up of two words, but they are used in exactly the same way as in English.

English	Egyptian
somebody	hadd	حــَد
anybody	'ai hadd	أ ي حـ ِّد
nobody	wala hadd	وَ لَا ۚ حَـَدٌ
something	haa ga	حا َج_َة anything	'ai haaga	أي حا ج_ة
nothing	wala haaga	و َلا َ حا َ جـــة
somewhere	ma kaan	مــَکا تَن anywhere	'ai ma kaan	أ ي مـ ـَكا ۖ ن
nowhere	wala makaan	و َلا َ مـــكا َن

Relative pronoun

A relative pronoun forms a relative clause, which describes a noun in the main clause. The relative pronoun represents that noun within the relative clause. In this example, the who-clause describes man in the first clause and who replaces he in the second clause:

I know a man - main clause he sells flowers - relative clause I know a man who sells flowers

In English, there are three different relative pronouns, some of which have subject, object and possessive forms:

Subject	Object	Possessive
who	whom	whose which	which	whose that	that

The relative pronoun اَ لِنِّي اَان is used to represent that, who and which

Kushsh ilvimeen illi gavi

I know the man who lives here 'ana Aaerif ilraagil illi saakin hina أنا َ عا رَ فِ ا لِرا َجـِل ا لِنِّي سا َكـِن هـِناَ

i know a man wnose nouse is enormous Aaarif raagil illi huwwa biytuh kibeer عاَر ف را َجيل ا يليّي هيُو ّ َ بييتيُه كيبير

Note that illi لَـّي is not used for whom:

Note that, in English, that can also be a demonstrative pronoun, a demonstrative determiner or a conjunction.

Adjectives

Adjectives can be used in two ways: to describe something, or to specify which one of several you are talking about (a qualifying adjective).

In English, you put the in front of a qualifying adjective. In Egyptian, you put iI- $\frac{1}{2}$) before both the qualifying adjective and the noun: the iI- $\frac{1}{2}$) before the adjective is the one that means that the adjective is specifying which one you mean. Note that adding iI- $\frac{1}{2}$) to a word affects the pronunciation if it begins with a sun letter.

Masculine, feminine, plural

In English, there is only one form of an adjective, but in Egyptian, most adjectives must agree in gender and number with the noun that they relate to. Here are some examples:

English	Egy	ptian
the man is clever	il raag il shaa Tir	الرا جيل شا طير
the woman is clever	il sitt shaTr a	السيت شاكر ة
the children are clever	il'aT faal shaT reen	الأطفا ل شا طيرين

The following table shows some typical feminine and plural forms:

English	masculi	ne	fen	ninine	plural
			-a ä		-yn	ین

brown	bun ni	ء ِ . ب ـ ُذ_ي	bun ni	ِـــُــــ ّ	bun ni	ء س بـــنــ ي

The feminine form of most adjectives is made by adding the suffix -a ـــ, and the plural is formed by adding the suffix -yn ــن. Note that adding a suffix may affect the pronunciation.

The plural form of an adjective is normally only used for many people: for many things, the feminine form is used. Animals are half-way between: in the same way as an English person might say 'he' or 'it' about a dog, Egyptians could use either the plural or the feminine form to talk about a group of animals

	thing plural	pers	on plural
the dogs are big	ilki laeb ki bee r a ۃ الکـيلا َب کـيبير ۃ		ا لِکـیلا َب کـیُبا َر
the dogs are good	ilki laeb kuwa yi s a الك يلا َب كـيُو يَيِس َة	ilki laeb kuwayis een	الكيلاً بكو ييسين

Some nouns, for example dibbaen ن بِيّا َن (flies) are collective nouns- a singular form is used to talk about a group of them. When an adjective is applied, the singular form of the adjective is used, for example:

We will look at some of the common exceptions later. Note that some words, for example brown bunni بـــُـنـّـى are invariable- you use the same form for masculine, feminine and plural.

Countries

A country name is usually converted to an adjective by adding -i -. This can be used to refer to a person, a language or something from a country.

For some countries, eg England, the adjective is made from the collective noun. Here are some examples:

English	Cou	ntry	m			f	collective noun

For countries ending with two consonants and alif, for example faransa فَـدَ تَسَا , the ending is - aawi وَى الله وَالله .

English	Country	m		f		pl

One common usage of the country adjective is to talk about a person from that country. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
an Egyptian man	waahid maSri	وا حيد مرصري
an Egyptian woman	wahda maSrya	واحد أة مرَصريرَة
an Englishman	waahid 'ingilizi	واحيد إنجيليزي

a Frenchman	waahid faransawi	وا حيد فر آنسوي
a Frenchwoman	wah da faransa wi ya	واحداة فرر أنسو يية

The feminine and plural are used only for people. For inanimate objects, the masculine form only is used. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
a Greek boat	markib yoo naa ni	مـرَكـِب يونا تني
French cheese	gibna faran saa wi	جرِبنرَة فرر نسا وي
American cars	ilAarabi yaat 'amri kaa ni	العرر بييات أمركا ني

Colours

The main colours follow a pattern. Here are some examples:

English	n	า		f	ŗ	ol

Slightly, Very... Extremely...

The following adverbs can be placed after the adjective:

English	Egyptian
slightly	sh wa ya	شو َيــَة
moderately	bi'iAti daal	بيِإعتيدا ك
very	'a wi	قــوي
	Kaa liS	خاليص
extremely	gid dan	جيِد"ا

Here are some examples:

English	E	Egyptian

this house is too big	il biyt dih ki beer 'a wi	ا لِب ِيت د ِه ک ِبير ق َوي

You may have noticed that the word qawy has two meanings: very and too. This sometimes causes confusion when Egyptians speak English: they say, for example, too much when they mean very much.

Comparatives

In English we take an adjective like big and add suffixes -er to make comparative bigger and -est to make the superlative biggest. In Egyptian there is one word, a comparative, that is used for both. The context indicates the meaning.

We can compare two things using min مـين, which is equivalent to than in English:

English	Egyp	tian
Ahmad is taller than me	'ah mad 'aTwal minni	أحمـ َد أ طو ل مين ي
he is more stupid than I thought	hu w wa 'aGba min ma kunt faa kir	هــُو " أغبى مين مـكـُنت فا كير

We can also make comparison without specifying the second thing like this:

English	Egyptian
Ahmad is a lot taller	أحمـَد أطو كل بـِـكـِتير ah mad 'aTwal biki teer'
the weather will be a little better tomorrow	ilgaww haykoon 'ah san shu wa ya buk ra ا لِجَوَّ حَيكون أَ حسيَن شُدُو يَدِهَ بِـُكر َة

For the superlative (best, biggest) the comparative is used immediately before a noun:

English	Едур	tian
mohammed is the tallest student	mu ham mad 'aTwal Taa lib	مــُحــَمـّــَد أطو كل طا كــِب
he is the youngest boy	hu w wa 'aSGar wa lad	هــُو " اَ اَصغـ َر و کــَد

it was the best day in my life	kaan 'ah san yoom fi ha yaa ti	كا َن أ حس َن يوم في حـــيا تني

Making comparatives

As you may have noticed from the previous examples, the comparative is often derived from the adjective as follows:

English	adjective		compa	arative
big	ki beer	کــِبیر	'ak bar	أكب
easy	sahl	س_َهِل	'as hal	أسه_ل
tall	Ta weel	طــويل	'a T wal	أطو َل classy	raa Qi	را َقي	'ar Qa	أرقى exceptions
good	kuwa y yis	کــُو - ــــيــِس	'ah san	أحس_َن

For adjectives with two consonants and ending in -i φ or -w φ , the final letter changes to aliflayena -a φ .

English	adjective		compa	arative
pretty	hi lw	حيِلو	'ah la	أحلى expensive	Gaa li	غاكي	'aG la	أغلى
loud/high	Aaa li	عاكي	'aA la	أعلى
rich	Ga ni	غـ َ ني	'aG na	أغنى healthy	Sa hi	صـ _َحي	no coi	mp stupid	Ga bi	غـ َب ي	'aG ba	أغبى
clever	za ki	ذ کي	'az ka	أذكى

For adjectives with three consonants where the last two consonants are the same, the middle vowel is replaced with a fatha -a.

English	adjective		compai	rative

In English, it is not possible to make a comparative in the usual way from some adjectives, for example interesting: instead, we say more interesting. The same is true in Egyptian: the words 'aktar القاد - more and 'a'aal القاد - less are used with the adjective. Here are examples of adjectives that are handled this way

Group	Example
participles beginning with m- →	the contract is more acceptable like this il Aa'd ma'bool 'aktar kidah الِعَـقَد مَـقبول أکتـر کـدِ َ ه
participles beginning with ta	l am less traditional than you 'a na ta'lidi 'a'aal minnak أنا َ تـاَقلـاِدي اقا لَ مـاِنــّــاَك adjectives beginning with 'a ^j	he gets more selfish every day hu w wa bi yib 'a 'a naa ni 'ak tar kul yoom هـُـو ّ َ بــِيـِيقا َ أَنَا آنِي أَكْتَـرَ كـُـل يوم
adjectives ending with -an ¹	Sarah is more tired than Ahmed saa ra taAbaana 'aktar min 'ah mad ساَ رَ َ قَ تَـيَّعْبا َ نَـيَّةُ أَكْتَـرُ مِـنِ أحمــَد

Verbs

A verb tells you what is happening- for example, reading, walking etc. In Egyptian, the general meaning of a word is defined by the consonants, and several related words may contain this set of letters. For example, the letters ktb are used to make the words write, type, book, writer, written, writing, office and desk. The exact meaning is affected by the vowels, prefixes and suffixes (extra bits at the beginning and the end). Here are some of the ways the exact meaning can change for verbs:

- tense when something happens (past, present, future)
- case who is doing it (I, you, he, etc)
- · mode must, could etc
- pronouns who is doing it, who is having it done to them
- negation say something is NOT happening

Most of the examples in this chapter use the verb katab کــــــــ, which means write: about 30% of verbs follow this pattern.

The web site www.lisaanmasry.org and the apps that you can download from the web site all provide full details for the majority of verbs.

Pronouns

There are three main types of pronouns that can be used with verbs:

- subject I, we, you, he, she, it, they
- object me, us, you, him, her, it, them
- · indirect object to me, to us, to you, to him, to her, to it, to them

In Egyptian, the subject pronoun is a separate word before the verb: the object and indirect object pronouns are attached to the end of the verb. Here are a some examples:

Pronoun	English	Egyp	tian
Subject	I know Ahmed	'ana Aaarif 'ahmad	أ نا ً عا ر ف أحمدَد
Subject, object	I know him	'a na Aar fuh	أ نا ً عا ر ف م
Object	Ahmed saw her yesterday	'ahmad shafha 'imbaarih	أحمـ د شا فها آ إمبا رح
Object	Sarah knows him	saa ra Aar fah	سار ة عار ف و
Object, Indirect	give it to me!	iddee hoo li	ا ِد ّي هولي

Subject pronoun

The subject pronoun appears before the verb or participle.

Object pronoun

You can attach an object pronoun (for example me or him) to the end of an imperative, verb or participle. See pronouns for more information.

English	Suffix
me	- ni	ني
us	- na	نا
you(m)	-ak	َك
you(f)	-ik	ِك
you(pl)	- kum	کـُم
him/it(m)	-uh	مْ
her/it(f)	- ha	-la
them	- hum	ۍـُم

If there is an -i- _- before the last consonant and the suffix starts with a vowel, the -i- _- is dropped. If the verb requires a preposition (to, from etc) the object goes on the preposition.

Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
show me!	war ree ni	و َر ّي ني
nobody helped us	ma had dish saa Aid na	م_َح_َد " شِ سا عَـدِنا -
I saw you(m)	'a na shuf tak	أنا ً شــ ُفت ك
I love you(f)	'a na ba hib b ik	أنا َ بــَحـِب ّ لِك
I know him	'a na Aar fuh	أنا عا ر ف م
I told them	'a na 'ul til hum	أنا َ قـ ُ لتــِل هــُم

Indirect object

Some verbs require two objects- for example:

It is the direct object and to me is the indirect object. The indirect object suffixes are as follows:

English	Suffix
to me	- li	لي
to us	- li na	لمينا
to you(m)	- lak	اً _ ك
to you(f)	- lik	ل_إك
to you(pl)	- lu ku	لـ كاك
to him/it(m)	- lu	لُ to her/it(f)	- la ha	ل_ه ا
to them	- lu hum	ــــ ــُـهــُـم

Tenses

In both English and Egyptian, a verb has different tenses to indicate when something happens- in the past, now or in the future. The usage of each tense will be explained in more detail later. Here are some examples using katab حَــَدَ:

Form	Exa	ımple	Meaning	No of cases perfect	ka tab	ک_َت_َب	he wrote	8 (i/we/ you, etc)
simple imperfect	yik tib	يرِکترِب	used with modals - eg he must write and kaan ک ک ک - he used to write	8 (i/we/ you, etc)
bi-imperfect	bi yik tib,	ب_یےکتےب	he is writing he writes he knows how to write used with kaan ن نه conditionals: if I had a pen, I would write	8 (i/we/ you, etc)
ha-imperfect	ha yik ti	هــَيــِکتــِد	he will write used with kaan ن ن	8 (i/we/ you, etc)
active participle	kaa tab	کا ّتـاِب	(he is) writing	3 (m/f/pl)
passive participle	mak toc	م_كتوب	(it is) written	3 (m/f/pl)
imperative	ik tib	ا ِکتــِب	write!	3 (m/f/pl)
polite request	mik tib	م_كتـب	will you please write verbal noun	ki taa ba	كـِتا َبــَة	(the box is covered with) writing	2 (s/pl)
place	mak tat	م_َكت_َب	writing place (desk or office)	2 (s/pl)

Case

The two main tenses of a verb are the perfect and the simple imperfect: the bi-and ha- imperfect just have prefixes added to the simple imperfect. The usage of these tenses will be explained in more detail in the section on time. Here is the he case of each tense:

Tense	English	Egyptian	ı
perfect	he wrote	hu w wa ka tab	هــُو" - كــَتــَب simple imperfect	he must write	hu w wa laa zim yik tib كتــِب	هـُو" - لا ز م يـ
bi-imperfect	he writes	hu w wa bi yik tib	هـُو " بييكتيب
ha-imperfect	he will write	hu w wa ha yik tib	هـُو ّ مَـيـِكتـِب

There are eight possible cases for each tense, corresponding to the eight pronoun forms (I/we/you/he, etc). Remember that the three imperfect forms are very similar.

Perfect

Here is an example of the perfect, which is used for things that occurred in the past.

Perfect
English	Pron	oun	Verb
I wrote	'a na	أنا	ka tabt	ک_َت_َب
we wrote	'ih na	إحنا	ka tab na	ک_َت_ب نا -
you(m) wrote	'in ta	إنت	ka tabt	 ک ــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــــ
you(f) wrote	'in ti	إنت_	ka tab ti	ک_َت_بـــِ تي
you(pl) wrote	'in tu	إنتوا	ka tab tu	ک_َت_ب ت و ا
he/it(m) wrote	hu w wa	ھ سے ھہ_و	ka tab	ک_َت_َب
she/it(f) wrote	hi ya	_ ھ ي	ka ta b it	ک_َت_ب ِ ت
they wrote	hum ma	هــُمـّا	ka ta b u	ک َ تَـ بِو ا

Simple imperfect

The imperfect has no meaning on its own, but is used with other verbal forms in five ways:

- with kaan کا تن for things that happened in the past
- with 'iza kaan إِذَا كَا أَن for conditionals
- with modals- must, could, should etc and modal verbs- like, going to.
- · with bi-prefix for things happening now
- with ha-prefix for things that will happen

Here is an example with laazim צ' נֿ אַ, which means must.

Simple Imperfect
English	Pron	oun	modal		Verb
I must write	'a na	أنا	laa zim	لآز م	'ak tib	أكتـِب
we must write	'ih na	إحنا	laa zim	لآز م	nik tib	ئـ کتــِب
you(m) must write	'in ta	إنت	laa zim	لاز م	tik tib	ت _کتـِب
you(f) must write	'in ti	إنت_	laa zim	لآز م	ti k ti bi	ت _کت_ِبي
you(pl) must write	'in tu	إنتوا	laa zim	لاز م	ti k ti b u	ت _کت_ِبو
he/it(m) must write	hu w wa	ء ســ ھــ و	laa zim	لاز م	yik tib	ي کت ِب
she/it(f) must write	hi ya	_ هـ ـ ِي	laa zim	لاز م	tik tib	ت _كتـِب
they must write	hum ma	ۿـُمـّا	laa zim	لاز_م	yik ti bu	ي _كت_ِبو ١

The English words must and might and the equivalent Egyptian words laazim لا زَرِم and yimkin are proper modals: they are the same for all cases. Later on, you will see how to use participles and verbs in the same way as modals, and you will see that they do change to match the case.

bi-imperfect

For the majority of verbs, the bi-imperfect is used to describe things happening now, and for habitual actions. See active participles for the exceptions

It is the same as the simple imperfect, with a bi- _- in front. Note that the vowels in the the beginning of the imperfect may change in some verbs when the prefix is added.

bi-imperfect
English	Prono	oun	Verb
I write	'a na	أنا	ba ktib	ب کت ِب
we write	'ih na	إحنا	bi ni ktib	ب_نـ کتـِب
you(m) write	'in ta	إنت	bi tik tib	ب_ت _كت_ِب
you(f) write	'in ti	إنت_	biti k ti bi	ب_ت _کت_ِبي
you(pl) write	'in tu	إنتوا	biti k ti bu	ب_ت _كت_بو ١
he/it(m) writes	hu w wa	ھ سے ھ_و	biyik tib	ب_ي _كت_ِب
she/it(f) writes	hi ya	- هــِي	bi tik tib	ب_ت _كت_ِب
they write	hum ma	هــُمـّا	biyi k ti bu	ب_ی _کت_ِبو ۱

ha-imperfect

The ha-imperfect is used for things that will happen at some time in the future.

It is the same as the simple imperfect, with ha- in front. Egyptian spelling is somewhat whimsical: some people use ha- instead. Note that the vowels in the the beginning of the imperfect may change in some verbs when the prefix is added.

ha-imperfect
English	Pron	oun	Verb
I will write	'a na	أنا	hak tib	ه کت ِب
we will write	'ih na	إحنا	ha nik tib	ه_نـ ِ کتـِب
you(m) will write	'in ta	إنت	ha tik tib	ه_تـ _کتـِب
you(f) will write	'in ti	إنت_	hati k ti bi	ه_ت _کت_ِبي
you(pl) will write	'in tu	إنتوا	hatik ti bu	ه_َت _کت_ِبو ۱
he/it(m) will write	hu w wa	ھ_ ہ	ha yi ktib	ه_ی _کت_ِب
she/it(f) will write	hi ya	- هـ ـ ي	ha tik tib	ه_تـ _کتـِب
they will write	hum ma	هـُمـّا	hayik ti bu	هـــيــ کتــِبو ۱

is/was/will be

As mentioned earlier, there is no word for is in Egyptian. There are, however, words for was - kaan کا تَ and will be - haykoon هـ يكون.

kaan "" can be used on its own to talk about some situation in the past, or it can be used with the imperfect and bi-imperfect to move the meaning of the verb into the past and also for conditionals, and with the ha-imperfect to indicate something that almost or nearly happened.

English	Prono	oun	Ve	erb
I was	aa na	اتنا	kunt	کــُنت
we were	ih na	احنا	kun na	ک_ُنیّا
you(m) were	'in ta	إنت	kunt	کــُنت
you(f) were	'in ti	إنت_	kun ti	ک_ُنتي
you(pl) were	'in tu	إنتوا	kun tu	کــُنتو ا
he/it(m) was	hu wa	ه ـ ُو	kaan	کا َن
she/it(f) was	hi ya	- هــِي	kaa nit	کا َنــِت
they were	hum ma	هــُمـّا	ka nu	کا َنوا

Here are some examples:

	English	Eg	yptian
	he was here	kaan hi na	كآن هينا
	I was too tired	kunt taAbaan 'awi	كـيْنت تــَعبا َن قــَوي
	the party was good	il haf la kaanit kuwa yi sa	الحَفَلَة كَا نَبِت كُو يَبِسَة
preposition	there was water, but it's finished	kaan fi mayaah wa KilSit	كان في مرَيا و خرلصرت
preposition	we had a house	kaan Aan di na biyt	کا ّن عــَند نِنا ٓ بــِیت
bi- imperfect	he was smoking a cigarette	kaan biyishrab seegaara	کا ن بیِی ِشر آب سیجا آر آة
bi- imperfect	he used to smoke cigarettes	kaan biyishrab sigaayar	کا ن بیِیشِ آب سیِجا آیدر
ha- imperfect	I almost ran him over	kunt ha doo suh	کــُنت هــَدوســُه

Note that, for prepositional sentences, kaan نَ does not change with the subject of the sentence - it is always kaan نَ ن - it was.

haykwn

haykoon هـَيكون simply means will be. Here are some examples:

haykwn
English	Pron	oun	verb
I will be	aa na	اَنا	ha koon	ه_كون
we will be	ih na	احنا	han koon	ه_َنكون

they will be	hum ma	هــُمـّا	hay koo nu	هـــَيكونوا

Adverbs

A verb explains what is being done: adverbs can be used to specify how, when, where and in what manner it is being done. There can be more than one adverb- they are placed after the verb. Here are some examples.

		Example
direction	Ahmed is going up (stairs) 'ahmad TaalaA foo'	أحمـ َد طا لَـ ع فوق position	Ahmed is coming here 'ahmad gayi hi na	أحم َ د ج َي ي هـِنا -

frequency

This group of adverbs specifies how frequently you do something. Here are some examples:

Degree

The following adverbs can be placed after an adjective or another adverb to indicate the degree:

English	Egyptian
slightly	shu wa ya	شـُو يَــَة
reasonably	maA 'oo la	م_عقول_ة
very	'a wi	قــوي
extremely	Kaa liS	خاكيص
	gid dan	جيِد"ا
	Aail 'a Kir	عـاً لِأخـِر
too	'a wi	قــوي

You may have noticed that the word qawy has two meanings: very and too. This sometimes causes confusion when Egyptians speak English: they say, for example, "I like you too much"" when they mean "I like you very much".

Derived adverbs

Most adjectives in English can be converted to an adverb by adding the letters -ly, for example nice becomes nicely. In Egyptian, the adjective can be converted to an adverb by adding the ending -an -

English	adjective	adverb
Liighon	aajootivo	aavoib

officially	ras mi	ر َسمي	ras m yan	ر سمياً theoretically	na Za ri	نــَظــَري	naZa ri yan	نــَظــَر ِيا ً
naturally	Ta bee Ai	طــ َبيعي	Tabee A yan	ط_َبيعيا ً literally	har fi	حــرفي	har f yan	حــرفياً
generally	Au moo mi	عــُمومي	Au moo man	عــُموماً
normally	Aaa di	عادي	Aa da tan	عــَد تَا
slightly	'u la yil	قـُلــَيـِل	'ala ya lan	ق_َل_َي_َلاً

Similarly, a noun can be converted to an adverbal phrase by adding the word with, for example with care. In Egyptian, the same can be achieved by adding \underline{bi} - $\underline{}$ - $\underline{}$ - $\underline{}$ at the start of the word.

English	Egyptian	Example
with care	bi ha zar رَ bi ha zar	he opened the box carefully fatah il Aal ba bihazar فـَتـَح ا لِعـَلبــَة بــِحــَذ رَّ

Prepositions

Prepositions define a relationship (in time, space,etc) between a noun and something else. In both English and Egyptian, the preposition goes before the noun that it defines the relationship to. Here are some examples:

Domain	English	Egy	/ptian	Example
time	after	baAd	بــَعد	she came after dinner hi ya gaat baAd il Aa sha' هـِي َ جا َت بـآعد ا لِعـاَشا َء
space	behind	wa ra	و را	the garden is behind the house ilgi nee na wara il biyt الجينينيَة و رَا ً الِبِيت
quality	like	za yi	ز َيي	I need another pen like this mih taag 'a lam thaa ni zayi dah مـِحتا َج قـَـلــَم ثَا تَني ز تَـيي د َه
reference	according to	ha sab	حـَسـَب	according to the police, the riot started at 2am hasab kalaam ilboolees, ilshaGab 'ibtada ilsaaAa ithneen حَيْسَيْب كَلَا مَا لِلوليس، الشَيْخَيْب إبتَيْدى السَاعَيَة الْيُثنين
ownership	have	Aand	عــَند	I have a house in Cairo Aan di biyt fi il 'ah ra عــَندي بـــِيت في ا ِلقا َ هــِر َة

The noun can be one of the following:

Element	Example	Senten	ce
proper noun	Ahmed	she is with Ahmed hi ya ma Aa 'ah mad	هـِي َ مـَع َ أ حمـيّ
simple noun	the house	the cat is inside the house il 'uT Ta gu w wa ilbiyt	الِقـُطـّــَة جـُوّا َ ال ِبـِيت
compound noun	a plastic bag	l don't want a plastic bag aa na mish Aaa yiz kees b las tik	اَنا َ ميش عا َيـِز کيس بلـيَستـيك
noun phrase	the man who	l arrived after the man who deliver wa Salt baAd il raag il il li wa Sal ilsig صَـــَل ا لِســـِجا لَد ةَ	• object pronoun	her	I arrived after her wa Salt baAd a ha	و َصــاَلت بـاَعد آهـاً
demonstrative pronoun	this	I need another pen like this mih taag 'a lam thaa ni za yi dah	مـِحتا َج قـَلــَم ثا َني ز َيي د َه

Be careful! If it's not a noun, but a complete clause (ie it has a verb), you have to use a conjunction. In English, it's confusing because the preposition and conjunction are often the same word: in Egyptian it is necessary to insert the word <a href="mailto:mailto

Subordinate clauses: maa

A preposition connects a noun to a sentence. If you want to connect a clause (something with a verb) to a sentence, you need to use a conjunction.

In English, many conjunctions are the same as prepositions: In Egyptian, some prepositions can be converted to a conjunction by adding the word $\underline{\mathbf{ma}}$ $\overset{\checkmark}{\sqcup}$. Here are some examples:

Preposition	Conjunction
wash your hands before dinner 'iG sil iee deek 'abl il Aa sha'	wash your hands before you eat 'iG sil iee deek 'abl ma taa kul
إغسـيل ا يِديك قـابل ا لِعـاشا َ ء	إغســِل ا يِديك قــَبل ما َ تا كــُـُل yikoon يـيكون is added in the last example because it is something that is unlikely to happen. See kaan for more details.

Conjunctions

Conjunctions are the useful little words that join clauses together to make more complex sentences.

I want to make bread but I don't have enough flour Aaayiz aacAamil Aiysh lakin maAandysh diqyq kifaayao

Part	English	Egyptian
Main clause	I want to make bread	Aaa yiz 'aAa mil Aiysh عاَ يـزِ أعـمَـل عـيِش
Conjunction	but	la kin لــکـين
Subordinate clause	I don't have enough flour	maAan deesh di 'ee' ki faa ya مـ َعـ َنديش د ِقيق كـِفا َيــَة

If you just want to attach a noun, you should use a preposition, but if you want to attach a clause (ie, there is a verb in bit that you want to attach), then a conjunction is required. In English, the same word is often used for both preposition and conjunction, but there are differences in Egyptian: see prepositions and conjunctions for more details.

In both English and Egyptian, you can put the subordinate clause either before or after the main clause. This doesn't change the meaning at all, just the emphasis.

You can go out when you have finished your homework mumkin tuKrug lammaa hatiKlis iil-waegib

When you have finished your homework, you can go out. lammaa hatiKlis iil-waegib, mumkin tuKrug

If there is a subject pronoun in the second clause, it becomes a pronoun suffix attached to the conjunction. For example:

I feared that she was lost aanaa Kuft iinnahaa tikwn taahit

The following table lists most of the common conjunctions, and gives examples how they can be used.

Note that and \underline{wa} $\underbrace{\ }$ is used a lot in narrative to replace conjunctions like next and then. It is also often used in place of but.

that-clauses

Verbs that deal with communication, opinion or emotions can be followed by a that-clause, which specifies what you said or thought or felt. Note that, in English, the that is sometimes omitted, but it's still a that-clause.

I think that you are wrong I think you are wrong

In Egyptian, this is expressed using 'inn ان . Note that the subject pronoun of the that-clause can be attached to 'inn ن as a suffix.

I said that I was busy 'ana 'ultiluh 'inni kunt mashGool أنا َ قَـُلْتــِلــُه إنـّـي كـيُنت مــَشغول

> I think that you are wrong 'aftikir 'innak Galtan افتےکر اِن ؓ ک غـانتاً

I know that he is lying 'ana Aaarif 'innuh biyikdib أنا َ عا رَ فِ إن ۖ هُ بِـيِـكِد بِ

I feared that she was lost aana Kuft 'innaha tikoon taahit اَنَا َ خَـُفت إن ّ َهَا َ تـيكون تا َ هــِت

> I think that we are ready 'aftikir 'inn 'ihna gahzeen افتـکـر إن اجنا َ جا َهـزين

Conditional clauses (if.. then...)

There are two words meaning if: they are 'iza [iza] and law (incumstances: law (iza [iza]) can be used under all circumstances: law (iza cannot be used with the imperfect form of a verb or a preposition.

In English, the word then is occasionally used to complement if. In Egyptian, there is no equivalent word.

If I were rich...

If an event or situation is improbable or impossible, in English we use modals like 'would' and 'were', or backshift the tense of the verb (for example, present becomes past). In Egyptian, the word kaan نَ ن is used after law السود العام الع

if I have time, I will read the book iicdhaa Aandy waqt, haaqraac iil-kitaab

if I had time, I would read the book law kaan Aandy waqt, kunt qaryt iil-kitaab

if I had money, I would buy a car law maayaa filws, kunt aacshtiryt Aarabiyao

When	conditional clause
past	'i za kaan إذا َ كا َن perfect present	'iza kaan اِذَا َ كَا َن + imperfect
future	'iza kaan اِذَا کَا نَ imperfect

Determiners

A determiner introduces a noun. There are four types of determiner:

Туре	English Examples
article	the, and demonstrative	this, that quantifier	some, any possessive	my, his

Articles

In English, there are two articles. The definite article the indicates that we are referring to something we have already mentioned, or the listener will understand which one we are talking about. The indefinite article a/an indicates that we are not talking about any particular instance of something. In Egyptian, there is a definite article iI-¹ but no indefinite article.

To talk about a particular man- the listener is expected to know which man we are referring to- we say 'the man' in English. In arabic, we attach il- - to the front of the noun.

Note that adding il-1 to a word affects the pronunciation if it begins with a sun letter.

For compound nouns, where we use a noun to describe another noun, the is used before the compound noun. In Egyptian, it is used before each word in the compound noun:

Note that, in Egyptian, il- - is used before nouns expressing abstract concepts. In English, it is not unless you are referring to a particular kind of whatever the noun relates to.

English		Egyptian
love is all you need	il hubb hu w wa kull il li 'in ta mah tal Ka	الحـبُ هـو كـل الله إنت محتلخة
the love of God	'allah ilhubb	ألـّـيه ا _لحـيُبّ
give peace a chance	' id di ilsa laam fur Sa	إدّي ا لِسلَلا مَ فـرُصلَة
movement is blessed	ilha ra ka ba ra ka	الِحرَر كَدَة برَر كَدَة

Demonstratives

Demonstratives are words that you generally use when you are pointing at something. In English, there are four demonstratives- this and that (singular) and these and those (plural). You generally use this/these to refer to something nearer to you, and that/those for something further away. They can be used either as pronouns (on their own) or as determiners (introducing a noun). In Arabic, there is just one demonstrative, but there are three forms- masculine, feminine and plural. It is used either as a pronoun (on its own) or as a demonstrative adjective (after a noun). Let's see how that works:

			Determine
Usage	English	Egyptian
pronoun	I like this (m)	'a na baa hibb dah	أنا با حــِب د م pronoun	I like this (f)	'a na baa hibb dih	أنا َ با حــِب د ِه pronoun	I like these (pl)	'a na baa hibb dul	أنا َ با حَـِب ّ د كُل
determiner/adjective	I like this book(m)	'a na ba hibb il ki tab dah	أنا ً بــَحـيِب " ا لِكـيِتـيَب د آه
determiner/adjective	I like this garden(m)	'a na ba hibb ilgi nee na dih	أنا َ بــَحـيِب " ا لِجـينينــَة د ِه
determiner/adjective	I like these book(m)	'a na ba hibb il ku tub dul	أنا بـَحـيِب الكِيْتيْب د ال

Note that, when this is used as a demonstrative determiner, dah • • is used as a demonstrative adjective: it goes after the noun, and il- • is used as a determiner before then noun.

Quantifiers

Quantifiers specify how much or how many of something we are talking about. Numbers give exact information, whereas quantifying determiners give an approximate idea. English examples are some, enough, any, many, few. Most English quantifiers do not have an equivalent in Egyptian: instead, quantifying adjectives (which follow the noun) are used. any does not have an equivalent: it is simply omitted.

Usage	English	Egyptian

adjective	you have many friends formal	Aan dak 'aS haab ki teer عـَند َك أصحا َب كـِتير
adjective	you have a lot of friends informal	Aan dak 'aS haab yaama عـَند َك أصحا َب يا َما
determiner	I am tired of too much talk	'ana zah Qaaen min kutr ilka laem أنا َ ز َ هَا َ ن مـِن كــُتر ا لِكــَلا مَ

Possessive suffixes

Possessives indicate who owns something- in English, they are words like my, his and their. In both English and Egyptian, they are similar to the corresponding possessive pronouns (mine, his, theirs), but they introduce a noun rather than being used on their own. In Egyptian, they are suffixes attached to the noun that they relate to, or to the ownership word bitaA the latter is used for most imported words.

The posessive suffixes themselves are pretty easy to learn, but when they are attached to nouns, the vowels do a little dance to make sure that you don't get three consonants in a row. Here are examples for nouns that end with one or two consonants:

Whenever you meet somebody that you already know, you should shake hands (very gently) and use one of the following greetings.

Before sunset, the following informal greetings are used:

	Eg	English
greeting	Sa baah il Keer	صــــ با ح ا لخير	a day of wellbeing response	Sa baah il noor	صـــــ َبا ح ا لِنور	a day of light response	Sa baah il 'ish Ta	صــيًا و القيشط	a day of cream response	Sa baah il ful	صــبا ح ا لِفيْل	a day of jasmine

After sunset, the following informal greetings may be used: I have heard them very rarely, though.

	Egy	/ptian	English
greeting	misa' ilKeer	ميساء الخير	an evening of wellbeing response	misa' il Keer	ميساء الخير	an evening of wellbeing response	mi sa' il ful	مـيسا َء ا لفـيُل	an evening of jasmine

Next, you should ask how they are:

Orders, suggestions and requests

There are several ways of telling somebody to do things- orders, strong recommendations, suggestions and polite requests....

- · an order do it!
- must you must do it
- · need to, have to you need to do it
- · should you should do this
- · could you could do this
- · would you like to... you could do this
- · are you going to to... you could do this
- · why don't you... you could do this
- can, could, would would you please do this?

Order

When you want to order somebody to do something, you use an imperative. This is only appropriate if you have some kind of control over somebody- for example, in the army or to a reluctant employee.

In English, we simply say the verb without a subject, for example Bring me the money! In Egyptian, there are is a special form or the verb for the imperative- or rather three forms-masculine, feminine and plural. Here are some examples.

	Imperfect		Imperative
English			Maso	Masculine		Feminine		Plural
Englion	mpe	11000			-i	-u
					ے	-وا
look!	yi buSS ຶ	يـِبـُصُ	buSS	ب_ُصّ	buS Si	بــُصـّي	buS Su	بــُصــّوا
go!	yi rooh	يـِروح	ruwh	ر ُوح	ruw hi	ر ُوحي	ruw hu	ر ُوحوا
eat!	yaa kul	یا َک ْ ل	kul	ک ٌ ل	ku li	کـ ُل ي	ku lu	کــُلوا shut up!	yus kut ت	یــُسکــُ	'is kut	ٳڛػؖؾ	'is ku ti	إسكــُتي	'is ku tu	إسك_توا
calm down!	yih da	یـِهدی	'ih da	إهدى	'ih di	إهدي	'ih du	إهدوا
walk! (go away)	yim shi	ي_مشي	'im shi	إمشي	'im shi	إمشي	'im shu	إمشوا

There are a couple of verbs have irregular imperatives.

				Imperative
English	Imperfect	Masculine		Fem	inine	Pl	ural
				-i	ے	-u	وا
bring!	يـِد ّي yid di	haet	ها ّت	hae ti	ها تي	ha tu	ها َتوا
come!	پــِيجِي yiy gi	ta Aaa la	تـيَعا َلَ	ta Aaa li	تــَعا َلي	ta Aa lu	تـيَعا َلوا

You cannot negate an imperative: instead, you use mish مــِش wrapped around the imperfect. For example:

English	Imperfect		Negative Imperative
Eligiisii	Imperiect	Masculine	Feminine	Plural

Orders, suggestions and requests

			-i	ي	-u	۔وا
don't look!	پــِبــُص ّyi buSS	mat buS Sisےُصـّــِش	matbuS S	مــَتبــُصــّيش}	matbuS S ç	؞ ۦ ؘؾ ۦ ؙڝۜۅۺ

obligation

With an imperative, you are imposing your own authority: you can be slightly more polite by suggesting some that there is some external obligation or reason that it should be done. In English, you can use modals like must, need to, have to.

In Egyptian, modals are followed by the simple imperfect. Most proper modals are invariable-there is no I/you/he form. Here are some examples:

Mod	lal	Example		Meaning
laa zim	لاز م	laa zim yik tib	لآز م ياكتاب	he must write mih taag	مـِحتا َج	mih taag yik tib	ميحتا َج ييكتيب	he needs to write ilmaf rooD	ا ِلمــَفروط	ilmaf rooD yik tib	ا ِلمـآفروض يـِكتــِب	he should write
Da roo ri	ضــ َروري	Da roo ri yik tib	ضــروري يــِکتــِب	it is essential that he should write

Suggestion

You can make a suggestion in several ways:

English	Egyptian
You could ask your father	mum kin tis 'al 'abook مـــُمكــِن تــِسأل أبوك
We could make a cake	mum kin ni Aa mil kee ka مـــُمكــِن نـيعــَمــِل كيكــَة
Let's go to the cinema	yal la ni rooh ilsee nee ma یـاّلا تنـروح ا اِلسینیما
Would you like to go and have lunch together	teegi ni rooh nit Gad da sa wa ت يجي نـيروح نـينغـيَد ّى سـيَوا
Would you like to go out?	ti hibb ti rooh ? تیدیب تیروح؟
Do you want to come?	Aae yiz teegy? عاَيـِز نيجي؟

Requests

When you want to ask somebody politely to do something, or for something, there are several ways of expressing this in English. In Egyptian, there are just two possiblities: using mumkin مـــُـــن and a modal, or less formally, putting the prefix mi- ___ before the perfect.

English	Egyptian
Could I have an orange juice, please?	? mum kin Aa Seer burtu 'aal , law sa maht مــُمكـين عــَصير بــُرتــُقا َل، لــَو ســَمــَحت؟

Could you open the door, please?	mumkin tiftah ilbaeb, law samaht? مـــمُكــين تــفِتــَح ا لِلبا ب، لــو ســمــحت؟
Why don't you entertain me?	misal lee ni مـــســَلـّيني

Questions

There are four main groups of questions.

- Direct- what, when, why
- · Indirect- courteous question, whether
- Confirmation isn't it so?
- Suggestions Why don't you...?
- · Rhetorical- you are making a point and don't expect an answer

English quirks

In English, it is possible to ask a question in many different ways. some of these translate easily into Egyptian: others require a little thought. The ones you need to watch out for are:

- · sentences with 'do' where you are not doing anything
- sentences with 'got' where you are not getting anything
- sentences with how followed by an adverb or adjective (see adverbal question)

For all English verbs except is and have, you can turn a statement into a question by putting do in front of it.

you know John do you know John?

In Egyptian, you can either add huwwa هـُـوّ at the start of the sentence or use inflection you know john?

The word have is somewhat overused in English, and British English speakers often reduce the risk of confusion by saying have you got rather than the older form, still used by many Americans, do you have...?. There is no equivalent in Egyptian, so inflection is used.

Direct questions

It is possible to frame a direct question in several ways:

- using a query word at the end of the sentence
- preceding a sentence with huwwa
- · by inflection

Query words

In English, a query word normally start the sentence: in Egyptian it is normally at the end of the sentence. For example where are you going? raayiH fyn?

The following query words can be used:

English	E	Egyptian
what	'ieeh	إيه
when	'im ta	إمتى
where	feen	فين
where from	mi neen	م_نین
how	'iz zai	إز " َي

which	'an hw	أنهو
how many	kaam	کا َم followed by singular noun
what (number)	kaam	کا َم
how much (of something)	'add ieeh	ق_د ّ ا ِیه
how much (money)	bi kaam	بـِکا َم
why	leeh	ليه

The simple imperfect ('aAamil, tiAooz, yirooh أعــَمــِل، تــِعوز، يــِروه) is often used in questions. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
how are you?	'iz za yak? إز ّ آي آك؟
how are you? lit. what are you doing?	'a Aa mil 'ieeh ? أعــَمــِل إ يه ؟

Pronoun questions

In English, it is possible to make a question by swapping the subject and verb. For example, he is English is he English?

The equivalent in Egyptian arabic is to put the query pronoun huwwa or, less frequently, hall at the start of the sentence. You should think of this as "Is it so that..."

huwwa 'inta gaai maAanaa? هــُو ّ اَنت َ جا َي مــَعــَنا َ؟ Is it so, that you are coming with us?

hall 'inta raaDi Aan 'afaAelak? *هــَـل ّ إنت َ را َ ضي عــن أفــَعـلــَك *Are you satisfied with your actions

Inflection

In English, you can make a statement by saying she is coming. or turn it into a question, she is coming? just by the tone of your voice: the pitch rises a little at the end of the sentence to indicate a question. You can do exactly the same thing in Arabic. hiya gayya هـِي َ جَـيْدِـهُ*، with a rising pitch on the last syllable, is a question.

Indirect questions (whether)

An indirect question is made up of two clauses: the first clause is often a courtesy clause "Could you possibly..." and the second clause is the real question. Here are some examples of direct and indirect questions.

Direct	Indirect
where is the station?	Can you tell me where the station is?
what is the time?	Do you know what the time is?
is he coming?	Do you know whether he is coming?

The query-word whether is used only in indirect questions: in Egyptian, 'iza 'i' is used for this.

English	Egyptian
Could I have a lemon juice?	mumkin Aaseer laymoon? مــُمكـين عــَسير لـيمون؟
Can you tell me where the station is?	mum kin ti 'u li feen ilma haT Ta? مــُمكــِن نــِقــُلي فین ا لِمــَحــَطــّــَة؟
Do you know what the time is?	'in ta Aaa rif il saa Aa kaam? إنتَ عا َر فِ ا لِسا َعـيَة كا مَعْ؟
Do you know whether he is coming?	'in ta Aaa rif 'i za hu w wa gayy? إنتَ عا َر ِف إ ذ ا أَ هـُو ّ َ جـَـيي؟

Confirmation questions

If you are pretty sure about something but want to check, you can use one of the following methods:

English	Arabic
he's coming, isn't he?	hu w wa mish gaay ? هــُو ّ ـ َ مــ ِشِ جا َ ي ؟
he's coming, isn't that so?	huwwa gaay, mish ki dah ? هــُو ّ َ جا َي، مــِش كــِد آه ؟
he's coming, right?	hu w wa gaay, Sahh? هــُو ّ َ جا َي، صــَح ّ؟

Suggestions

In English, you can suggest something by saying "Why don't you..." in Egyptian, you can get the same effect by putting mi-_- on the front of a verb. For example:

ma__tsally-ny shuwayao
Why don't you entertain me for a while?

Rhetorical questions

A rhetorical question is used to make a point: you don't expect an answer. Any of the above methods can be used to ask rhetorical questions.

English	Arabic
wouldn't it be better if you(m) shut up?	mish tiskut 'ahsan? میش تیسکیت أحسین؟
you(m) must be kidding!	bit haz zar, mish ki dah ? بـيِـّهـزَــّ ر، مـيش كـيد آه ؟
you(m) are an idiot, right?	'in ta 'ah bal , Sahh? إنتَ أهب_َل، صـرَح ّ

Adverbal and adjectival questions

In English, it is possible to ask a question using how followed by an adjective or adverb. There is no similar construction in Egyptian, so it is necessary to re-phrase the question, usually so that you are asking for a number. Here are some examples:

English	re-phrased	Egyptian
How fast were you driving?	how many kilometers an hour	kaam keeloo mitr fi il saa Aa کام کیلومیِتر في ا لِسا عَـیَة
How often do you go to the gym?	how many times a week	kaam mar ra fi il'us b waA كام مـر " ة في ا لِأ سُسِو ع,,,
How hot is the oven?	what is the temperature?	ilhar raa ra kaam الِحــَرَّا رَ ةَ كَا تَم
How difficult was the exam?	was the exam difficult	huwwa il'imti haan kaan SaAb ? *هــُو " اَ الإمتــِحا اَن كا اَن صــَعب؟

Negation

The word \underline{mish} مــِث is used to negate a phrase. It is either placed in front of the verb or preposition, or wrapped around it.

Numbers

Arabic digits are not the same as European digits, but unlike the letters they go in the same orderthe least significant digit goes last, so the digits in a three digit number would be hundreds, tens and units. The digits are:

Dig	jit	English	Egyptian
0	•	zero	Sifr	صــِفر

2	۲	two	'it neen	إتنين

Cardinals and Ordinals

In both English and Egyptian, there are two forms of number- cardinals and ordinals. Cardinals are used to count things (one, two, three), Ordinals are used to describe sequence (first, second, etc).

	Example	Function
Cardinal	five	used to count things
Ordinal	fifth	used to describe the order, or position in sequence, of something

Cardinals

Cardinals are used for counting and specifying how many of something. Usage of the first few numbers is complicated, but it gets easier after that :-). There are special rules for:

- People of a particular nationality (eg one Englishman)
- Quantities- weight, money, and when you are ordering something (eg teas)
- People in general (men, women etc)
- · Things everything else

Zero

For zero, there is no equivalent of no as in no books. Instead, the verb or preposition is negated with mish في For example, fi في means there is..., and so mafeesh مَــِثُ فيشُ means there is no.... As in English, the noun is a plural. Alternatively, you can use or without- min Geer مــِن غير.

One

The number one has a masculine and feminine form. Both forms are used for people of a particular nationality eg an Englishman.

For weights, money and when ordering things, the masculine form only is used.

In English, we would usually say a book rather than one book: the same is true in Egyptian, but there is no word for a - the noun is simply used on its own.

---------	----------

one	waa hid	واحديد

a book	ki taab	ک_ِتا َب
a chair	kur si	ڪــُر سي

Two

For people of a particular nationality, eg two Englishmen or two Egyptians, use the number 'itneen إتنين followed by a plural noun.

For weights, money and orders, use the number 'itneen اِتنين followed by a singular noun.

For things, you should use the suffix -yn بن for masculine nouns and -teen بن for feminine nouns. Nouns ending in -i بيدين take the ending -iyyin بيدين. This is equivalent to a couple which can mean exactly two, or approximately two.

Three to Ten

For People of nationalities, use the number followed by a plural noun.

For weights, money and when ordering things, use the number followed by a singular noun.

Digit	English	Egyptian	English	Egyptian
3	three	ta laa ta	three books	talat kutub

	٣		تــَلا ـَتــَة		تـَلــَت كــُتــُب
4	٤	four	'ar ba Aa أرب_َع_َـة	four books	'ar ba Aa ku tub أربــَع َ كــُتــُب

10	١.	ten	Aa sha ra عـاَشـار اَة	ten books	Aa sha ra ku tub عـ َ شـرَ َة كــُتــُب

English	Singular		Plural
day	yoom	يوم	ti yaem	تيِيا َم
mont	shahr	شــــــهر	tush hoor	ت_ُشهور
person	na far	نــَفــَر	tin faar	تـينفا ر

Eleven to Ninety Nine

From 11 onwards, if the number is followed by a noun, the noun must be singular:

English	Egyptian	English	Egyptian
eleven	hi daa shar حـِدا َشـرَ	eleven books	hi daa shar ki taab حـدِدا ۖ شـرَ کـرِتا ؔ ب

The digits in Egyptian numbers are written in the same order as in European numbers. When expressed as words, however, the two digits are stated as units and tens, as in German not English, with wa j in between:

Here are the numbers from 20 to 90:

English	Egyptian
twenty	Aasha reen	عـ ـَشــَرين
thirty	tala teen	تـ َـلـ َتين
forty	'arba Aeen	أرب_عين

seventy	saba Aeen	ســَبـعين
eighty	tama neen	تــَمــَنين
ninety	tis Aeen	ت_سعين

Hundreds

Here are the numbers from one to nine hundred. Note that the short form meet ميت is used when hundreds are followed by a noun (which must be singular):

English	Egy	otian	short + singula
one hundred	mi ya	م_يــَة	meet kitaab	میت کــِتا ـَب
two hundred	mi teen	مـ ِتين	mi teen ki taab	م ِتين ک ِتا َ ب

Thousands

Here are the numbers from one to nine thousand. Five thousand should really be Kamsaat 'alf فَــَــَـسا تَ ٱلْف, but it is pronounced as below.

English	Egyptian
one thousand	alf	اَلَف
two thousand	al feen	ا ۖ لفين
three thousand	talat talaaf	تــَلــَت تــَلا َف
four thousand	'ar baA ta laaf	أربـيَع تـيَلا يَف

Ordinals

To explain the sequence of things (first, second, third), you use the ordinal. It can be either as an adjective or as a noun in the genitive form: As an adjective, the ordinal be preceded by il J_{\perp} and, for 1 to 9, must agree with the gender of the noun. From 11 onwards, the cardinal numbers are the same as ordinals, and are used as adjectives only.

English	Egyptian
the third day	il yoom il taa lit	اليوم التاكيت

Ownership

There are several different ways to indicate ownership and belonging. These are:

Egyptian	Meaning	Egyptian	English
possessive pronoun	my/your/his	'is m uh إسم ً ه	his name simple genitive	of	ism il wa lad ا ِسم ا رِلُو کَدرَد	the name of the boy
bi taaA ب_تِتا َع	belonging	ilbas boor bi taa Ai ا ِلْبَـ َسبور بِـ ِتَا َعِي	my passport
Aand عـَـنـ	ownership	Aan di biyt عــَندي بــِيت	I have a house
ma Aaَع	have with you	ma Aaak kab reet ? مــَعا کَ کــَبریت؟	Do you have matches (on you)?
اا لي	having for a purpose intended for attached	fi boos Ta leek في بوسطــَة ليك	there is some post for you milk م_لك	(my/your/his) property	il biyt dah mil kuh البييت د آه ميلكــُـه	that house is his property

possessive pronoun

In both English and Egyptian, the most common way of expressing ownership is with a posessive pronoun (my, your... etc). In Egyptian, this is a suffix attached to the noun. Here are some examples:

English	Arabic
my name	'is mi إسم ي
your(m) name	'is m ak إسم ك
your(f) name	'is m ik إسم ك
my house	biy ti بـِي تي
his house	biy t uh بــِيت مُ
my father	'ab w ya أبو يا
your(f) father	'a boo ha أبو ها
his father	'a booh أبوه
our god	rab bi na رَب ّ نا

The posessive pronouns themselves are pretty easy to learn, but when the pronouns are attached to nouns, the vowels do a little dance to make sure that you don't get three consonants in a row. See pronouns for more information.

simple genitive

In English, the simple genitive can take two forms: both are expressed in the same way in arabic.

English	Egyptian
the man's name	ism il raag il' إسم الرا جيل
the name of the man	'ism il raa gil إسم الرا جيل il- $\stackrel{\cdot}{}_{-}$ can be attached to the second noun if required, but must never be attached to the first noun. If the first noun is feminine, the -a $\stackrel{\cdot}{}_{-}$ ending changes to -it $\stackrel{\cdot}{}_{-}$. Nothing must be placed between the two nouns. Adjectives go after the second noun, but must agree in gender and number with the first noun. If a possessive suffix is required, it must go on the second word (or use bitaaA $\stackrel{\cdot}{}_{-}$). Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
the boy's name is strange	'ism il wa lad Ga reeb اسم الِو لَـدَ غـرَيب
I have her telephone number	Aandi nim rit tilee foon ha عَيندي نيمر ِ ق تيليفونها

بـِـــَـع Belonging- bitaA بــِــــَـ bitaA بــِـــــ is used in several ways:

- noun + bitaA + possessive suffix, to indicate ownership
- noun + bitaA + possessive suffix, as an alternative to a genitive
- bitaA + product (milk, onions, tyres etc), to indicate somebody who sells the product
- bitaA + possessive suffix, to refer to a man's or woman's private parts

عــَـك Ownership - Aand

Aand عـنّـه means that you own something but don't necessarily have with you. It can also be used about members of your family. An object pronoun can be added to indicate who owns something. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
I have a car	Aan di Aara bi ya

	عــندي عــر آبــِيــة
he has two children	Aan duh wala deen عـــَند مُ و لـــَدين

he has	Aan duh عــاَند هُ
she has	Aan da ha عــاند َها
they have	Aan du hum عــَند مُهــُم

Having with you maAa ٓحـَـه

 $\underline{\mathbf{ma}}\mathbf{Aa}$ means that you have something or somebody with you. It takes an object suffix to say who it is with.

English	Egyptian
Do you have the keys?	maAak ilmafateeh? مــَـعــَك ا لِمــَفا تَنيح؟
I will go with you	a na ha rooh maAaak' اُنا َ ها رَوح مـيّعـيّـك

she has	ma Aaa ha مـيَعا َها َ
they have	ma Aaa hum مـيَعا َ هـيُم intended for - الله - الله intended

 $\underline{\mathbf{li}}$ can be used for parts of the body, members of your family, for something that is attached, and for something that is intended for somebody or something. It is also used when an inanimate object has something. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian

Quantities

You can specify a quantity in several ways:

- · measures metres, kilos etc
- numbers
- · containers packs, bottles etc
- · approximate amounts a little, a lot etc

Measures

For weights, lengths and other measurements, you use a number followed by a singular noun.

Ahmed is 1m90 tall	'ah mad Too looh mitr 1 wa 90 san ti أحمرَد طولوه مرِتر ۱ و ۲۰ سرَنتي

See the section in numbers for more information about this.

Containers

If you want something in a container of some sort: carton, bottle, etc, you use the genitive of the container. The main effect of this is that words ending in tee-marbuta -a عَـــ are pronounced -it بــــ Here are some examples:

you must take one spoonful of medicine	laa zim ta Kuz maAla'it dawa' لاَز مِ تَـَخـُذُ مـاَعلـاَقـية د اَوا اَء

a bottle of water, please	'iz zaa zit maa ya , law sa maht إزاّ زَّ مَا يَدَة، لَوَ سَمَحت

A/an and Some

In English, if you are talk about one non-specific instance that is countable you would use the indefinite article a or an, for example a book or an apple. There is no equivalent of a/an or some in Egyptian arabic.

Likewise, when you are talking about an unspecified amount something that is not countable, you say some sugar. Again, there is no equivalent in Egyptian Arabic. You can specify a quantity, for example shuwayit

Approximate measures

Questions

There are four main groups of questions.

- Direct- what, when, why
- Indirect- courteous question, whether
- Confirmation isn't it so?
- Suggestions Why don't you...?
- · Rhetorical- you are making a point and don't expect an answer

English quirks

In English, it is possible to ask a question in many different ways. some of these translate easily into Egyptian: others require a little thought. The ones you need to watch out for are:

- · sentences with 'do' where you are not doing anything
- sentences with 'got' where you are not getting anything
- sentences with how followed by an adverb or adjective (see adverbal question)

For all English verbs except is and have, you can turn a statement into a question by putting do in front of it.

you know John do you know John?

In Egyptian, you can either add huwwa هـُـوّ at the start of the sentence or use inflection you know john?

The word have is somewhat overused in English, and British English speakers often reduce the risk of confusion by saying have you got rather than the older form, still used by many Americans, do you have...?. There is no equivalent in Egyptian, so inflection is used.

Direct questions

It is possible to frame a direct question in several ways:

- using a query word at the end of the sentence
- preceding a sentence with huwwa
- · by inflection

Query words

In English, a query word normally start the sentence: in Egyptian it is normally at the end of the sentence. For example where are you going? raayiH fyn?

The following query words can be used:

English	E	Egyptian
what	'ieeh	إيه
when	'im ta	إمتى
where	feen	فين
where from	mi neen	م_نین
how	'iz zai	إز " َي

which	'an hw	أنهو
how many	kaam	کا َم followed by singular noun

how much (of something)	'add ieeh	قـَدّ ا ِیه
how much (money)	bi kaam	بـِکا َم
why	leeh	ليه

The simple imperfect ('aAamil, tiAooz, yirooh أعــَمــِل، تــِعوز، يــِروه) is often used in questions. Here are some examples:

English	Egyptian
how are you?	'iz za yak? إز ّ أي ك

Pronoun questions

In English, it is possible to make a question by swapping the subject and verb. For example, he is English is he English?

The equivalent in Egyptian arabic is to put the query pronoun huwwa or, less frequently, hall at the start of the sentence. You should think of this as "Is it so that..."

hall 'inta raaDi Aan 'afaAelak? *هــَـل ّ إنت َ را َ ضي عــن أفــَعـلــَك *Are you satisfied with your actions

Inflection

In English, you can make a statement by saying she is coming. or turn it into a question, she is coming? just by the tone of your voice: the pitch rises a little at the end of the sentence to indicate a question. You can do exactly the same thing in Arabic. hiya gayya هـِي َ جَـيْدِـهُ*، with a rising pitch on the last syllable, is a question.

Indirect questions (whether)

An indirect question is made up of two clauses: the first clause is often a courtesy clause "Could you possibly..." and the second clause is the real question. Here are some examples of direct and indirect questions.

Direct	Indirect
where is the station?	Can you tell me where the station is?
what is the time?	Do you know what the time is?
is he coming?	Do you know whether he is coming?

The query-word whether is used only in indirect questions: in Egyptian, 'iza is used for this.

English	Egyptian
Could I have a lemon juice?	mumkin Aaseer laymoon? مــُمكـين عــَسير لـيمون؟
Can you tell me where the station is?	mum kin ti 'u li feen ilma haT Ta? مــُمكــِن نــِقــُلي فین ا لِمــَحــَطــّــَة؟
Do you know what the time is?	'in ta Aaa rif il saa Aa kaam? إنتَ عا َر فِ ا لِسا َعـيَة كا مَعْ؟
Do you know whether he is coming?	'in ta Aaa rif 'i za hu w wa gayy? إنتَ عا َر ِف إ ذ ا أَ هـُو ّ َ جـَـيي؟

Confirmation questions

If you are pretty sure about something but want to check, you can use one of the following methods:

English	Arabic
he's coming, isn't he?	hu w wa mish gaay ? هــُو ّ مَــ ِش جا َيِ؟
he's coming, isn't that so?	huwwa gaay, mish ki dah ? هــُو ّ َ جا َي، مــِش كــِد آه ؟
he's coming, right?	hu w wa gaay, Sahh? هــُو ّ َ جا َي، صــَح ّ؟

Suggestions

In English, you can suggest something by saying "Why don't you..." in Egyptian, you can get the same effect by putting mi-_- on the front of a verb. For example:

ma__tsally-ny shuwayao
Why don't you entertain me for a while?

Rhetorical questions

English	Arabic
wouldn't it be better if you(m) shut up?	mish tiskut 'ahsan? مــش تــِسكــُت أحســَن؟
you(m) must be kidding!	bit haz zar, mish ki dah ? بـيِتهـزَدّ َر، مـيش كـيد َه ؟
you(m) are an idiot, right?	'in ta 'ah bal , Sahh ? إنتَ أهبــَل، صـــَحَّ"؛

Adverbal and adjectival questions

In English, it is possible to ask a question using how followed by an adjective or adverb. There is no similar construction in Egyptian, so it is necessary to re-phrase the question, usually so that you are asking for a number. Here are some examples:

English	re-phrased	Egyptian
How fast were you driving?	how many kilometers an hour	kaam keeloo mitr fi il saa Aa کام کیلومیتر فی ایسا عیة
How often do you go to the gym?	how many times a week	kaam mar ra fi il'us b waA كام مـر " دَة في ا لِلا سُسِو ع,,,
How hot is the oven?	what is the temperature?	ilhar raa ra kaam الِحــَرَّا رَ ةَ كَا مَم
How difficult was the exam?	was the exam difficult	huwwa il'imti haan kaan SaAb ? هـُـو الله الله الله الله الله الله الله الل

Which one?

This section explains how to specify which of several things we are interested in, or talking about.

Definite article

To talk about a particular man, we say 'the man' in English. In arabic, we attach il- - to the front of the noun.

the man is reading his book iil-raagil biyiqraac kitaab-uh

See articles for more information.

Indefinite article

If we don't want to refer to any man in particular, we say 'a man' in English. There is no equivalent of a in arabic, you just use the noun on its own.

I want a dog aacnaa Aaayiz kalb

If you want to make it clear that you are talking about just one, you can use the word waaHid- one. When used for emphasis like this, you place it after the noun.

I want (just) one dog

aacnaa Aaayiz kalb waaHid

You also use it with nationalities to indicate that you are talking about a person, rather than (for example) the language.

an English man (or woman) waaHid iingilyzy waaHdao iingilyziyao

Adjectives

In both English an Egyptian, you can use an adjective to specify which one you are interested in: you simply put the - iI- $\frac{1}{2}$ in front of the adjective. Note that, in Egyptian, the noun still retains its iI- $\frac{1}{2}$ in prefix.

	English	Egyptian
describe	I want a red ball	Aaa yiz koo ra ham ra عاَ يـِز كور َة حـاَمر َة specify	I want the red ball	Aaa yiz il koo ra il ham ra عاَيدِز ا لِلكور ةَ ا لِلحدَمر ةَ
specify	I have read the big book	'a ra't il ki tab ilki beer قررا َ عت ا رِلک ِترَب ا رِلک ِیبر

Demonstrative adjectives

One particular type of adjective is a demonstrative adjective. These are almost the same as the demonstrative pronouns.

iil-raagil dah

The demonstrative adjectives are:

English	Arabic
this (man)	il raa gil dah ا ِلرا جـلِ د َه
this (thing, m)	ilki taab dah ا ِلکــِتا َب د َه
this (thing, f)	il ha ga dah ا ِلٰهــَجــَة د َ ه
this (woman)	il sitt di ا_لسـيِت ّ د ي
these (men)	ilragaala dool الِر جا لا دول
these (men) nearer	ilra gaa la di ا ِلر َجا َلا َ دي
these (women)	ilsit taat dool ا ِلسـِتِـّا َت دول
these (things,m)	ilku toob di ا ِلٰک ٌ تُوب د ي
these (things,f)	ilha gaat di ا ِله َجا َت دي
over there (m)	'a hw أهو
over there [f]	'a hi أهي
over there (pl)	'a hoom أهوم

Comparatives

You can use a comparative in the same was as an adjective to specify which one you mean:

English	Egyptian
mohammed is the tallest student	mu ham mad 'aTwal Taa lib ـــُــــَـــَـــَد أ طو لَ طا لَـــِب

Time

Time can be expressed in several different ways:

- · units of time days, weeks etc
- parts of the day morning/afternoon
- time of day 6.30
- relative time (before/after) today/yesterday etc
- days of the week
- dates

Units of time

Time of day

In English, it is normal to use half and quarter hours to describe time. In addition, in Egyptian, thirds are used. Here is a list of the words that can be used:

English Egyptian

half	nuS	نــُص
a third	tilt	تاِلت
a quarter	rubA	ر بُع

October	'uk too bar	أ ْكتوب_ر
November	noo vim bir	نوڤ مِدرِر
December	dee sim bir	ديسيمبير

Arabic Writing

This describes the arabic alphabet, and how it can be written using roman letters.

Please remember that Egyptian Arabic is an oral language. When people are asked to write it, some write in Modern Standard Arabic and then pronounce it the Egyptian way, others write it as an Egyptian would say it. As a result, there may some variation in the way things are spelt. For example, many verbs end in alif-layena a ς , but many people write it as a regular alif a $\widetilde{}$.

Arabic script

There are 28 basic letters in Egyptian arabic, and about a dozen modifiers.

Writing goes from right to left, and the majority of arabic letters join onto the following letter and so there are therefore four forms of each letter: solitary, initial, middle and final. For the six letters that do not join, there are just two forms- solitary and final.

position	normal letter	non-joining letter
solitary	E	7
initial	÷ middle	÷
final	E -

The three short vowels a $\tilde{\ }$, i and u and shadda $\tilde{\ }$, which doubles the length of a consonant, are collectively called tashkeel تــَشْكِيَّل or vowellization. Tashkyl is not normally used in written arabic apart from in the Quran. If they are used, they are written above a consonant but pronounced after it: for the convenience of non-arabic readers, I have included the tashkyl, but written it after the consonant.

See the Arabic Alphabet section for full information about each arabic letter, including the european letters used.

Fatha is the short vowel corresponding to a. It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

		Example words
Pronounced:	а	ma Taar	مـَطا َر
		shahi y ya	ش َـه_يد _ة
IPA Phonetic:	æ/	Aammi y ya	عا َمــّـييـَة
Tashkyl:	-	'it ka saf	إتك_َسر_َف
		fatta haet	فـَتـّا َحا َت

_ kasra

Kasra is the short vowel corresponding to i. It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

Example words

gih	جيِه
Ai r wa	عـِرو َة
bint	بإنت
muzdahi meen	مـُزد َحـِمين
vi'dar	د قد َ د

Pronounced: i IPA Phonetic: /ɪ/ Tashkyl:

¹ damma

Damma is the short vowel corresponding to \mathbf{u} . It is normally written above a consonant and pronounced after it. For ease of reading, this dictionary puts short vowels after the consonant. Short vowels are normally omitted except in the quran.

Example	words
mu taen	مـُتا َن
Pronounced: u nukta	نــُکتـَـة
IPA Phonetic: /ט/	 ک ـُ و َر
Tashkyl: ku war

buroo ku l	بـُروكـُلي i

ຶshadda

Shadda is written above a consonant and doubles the consonant. Unlike in english, double consonants are pronounced, so if you take katab and put a shadda above the t, it will be pronounced kat-tab, with one t and the end of the first syllable and one t at the beginning of the next syllable. Shadda is often omitted in written arabic. Double-lem and double-yeh are often written as two separate letters, rather than one with a shadda.

Tashkvl:	ω

i alif-hamza above

Alif with a hamza above is used mainly at the beginning of words. It represents a gluttal stop followed by fatha - a short a. Strictly speaking, it should be written with both a hamza and a fatha.

Pronounced:	'a	Example words
IPA Phonetic:	/?æ/	'a daet	أداءة

Final:		'a' faaS	أقفا َص

) alif-hamza below

Alif with a hamza below is used only at the beginning of words. It represents a gluttal stop followed by kasra - a short i. Strictly speaking, it should be written with both a hamza and a kasra. Alif-hamza below is used at the beginning of the perfect of many derived verbs, which are formed by adding a prefix (it-, in-, ist- and i?t-) to a base verb. These derived verbs often have a passive (be ...ed) or reflexive (oneself, each other) meaning.

Solitary:		'ug ra	أجرآة
Final:	Ĺ	'um mi	أم_ّي

∫ alif-fatha

Alif with a fatha is used only in the middle and at the end of words. It is usually pronounced either as ae as in aeroplane, or as ar as in hard: these two forms are represented as ae and aa respectively in transliterated arabic. When it is followed by two consonants in a row or a consonant and a long vowel, it is shortened to a short a.

When it follows a lem, the two letters are joined together and written \(\frac{1}{2} \). At the end of the 'we' and 'they' form of pronouns and verbs, wow-alif is pronounced as oo.

Pronounced:	a	Example words
IPA Phonetic:	/æ/	raQ QaS	را َقــَص
Join left:	no	mar ka	ما َرکـَة
Sun letter:	no	da wa'	د َوا َء
Solitary:	1	Say meen	صا ًيمين
Final:	Ĺ	see ni ma	سين_ما

Alif-kasra is used only in \mathcal{J} il, the prefix meaning 'the'. As the kasra is never actually written, it is not clear whether 'the' should be pronounced il, el, or al. As a result, there are regional differences in pronunciation. In the dictionary, we have standardized on il, to avoid confusion.

Pronunciation rules

Stress

In the pronounced form, the syllable that is stressed is underlined.

In most words, the second to last syllable is usually stressed.

The stress moves to the last syllable if it contains a long vowel (alif, wow, yeh) or ends with a double consonant. Remember that the letter AIN is treated as a consonant.

This means that the stress will move if suffixes are added to a word.

Feminine endings

When a word ends in _aaCiC (where C is any consonant) has a feminine ending attached, the i disappears and the aa is pronounced as an a.

Elision

If a word ends with a vowel and the first vowel of the next word is either an i or a u, the words are run together (elided) and the i or u omitted.

This also happens if you attach an object suffix that begins with an i.

consonant clusters

If putting two words next to each other makes more than two consonants in a row, a shwa (which sounds like a short a) is inserted between the words.

Sun letters

If the definite article, il- اَ لِـ اَ, is attached to a word that begins with a sun-letter (t s sh d z r z S D T Z n ت سُ ش د ذ ر ز ص ض ظ ظ ن) the l is dropped and the sun-letter is doubled:

Exceptions

The pronunciation of some pronoun and verb endings is a little unusual. For the you(pl) 'intu النوا subject pronoun and for you(pl) and they in the verb perfect, the ending is written -w a العربة but pronounced -uh المربة على المرب

The word because is written Aalashaan عـلَــَشَا اَن but pronounced Aashaan عـلَــَشَا اَن

.بــُرتـيُقا َن but pronounced burtu'aan بـُرتـيُقا َل but pronounced burtu'aan بـُرتـيُقا َ

Verbs: Root and Stem

A verb is made up of a root (a set of consonants) and a stem (a prefix and the vowels between). There may be more than one verb derived from the same root- for example, starting with fhm, you can make fihim (to understand) and fahhim (to make somebody understand).

Most roots have three consonants: some have either two or four. For the purposes of this explanation, I have used the letters DKST- all uppercase- for consonants, and lowercase letters for all vowels except Y - alif layena. You can say these words if you wish, but they don't actually mean anything. Remember that Ain is a consonant.

There are five main roots, and each of these can make three main stem types, as per the following table.

	Α	В	С	D	E
1	DaaK DyK DwK	DaKy DaKY DaKaa	DaKK	DaKaS DaKis DiKis	DaKSaT DaKSiT
2	DayyiK DawwaK	DaKKY DaKKy	DaKKaK	DaKKaS DaKKiS
3	DaayiK DaawiK	DaaKy DaaKY		DaaKiS

From any of these main stems, it is possible to derive more stems by adding prefixes. Here are some examples:

Prefix	Main stem	Derived stem	Meaning
iit-	DaKaS	iitDaKaS yitDaKaS	passive (be -ed) reflexive ( oneself)
iit-	DaKKaS	iitDaKKaS yitDaKKaS	passive (be -ed) reflexive ( oneself)
iit-	DaaKiS	iitDaaKiS yitDaaKiS	each other iiDt-	DaKaS	iiDtaKaS yiDtaKaS	as iit-iin-	DaKaS	iinDaKaS yinDaKaS	as iitiista-	DaKaS	iistaDaKaS yistaDaKaS	consider or seek

There are also some verbs that are derived from classical arabic- the perfect generally begins with \underline{a} or \underline{ta} .

About this dictionary

I would like to thank all of the people who helped me to create this dictionary: Shaimaa and Khaled Adel, Walaa Bakir, Yasmin Musallam, Rana el Hindy, Suze Labib, Zeina el Sarrag, Reem el Gohary, Monzer abu el Yazeed, Mariam Ghattas, Sanaa al Hady, Amani Mokhtar... not forgetting the crew of the Red Sea Star, the shopkeepers in Hurghada... and even a couple of taxi drivers!

The logo was designed by Khaled Adel.

A big thankyou also to the software wizards who developed the tools that I used to build the database and the deliverables:

Egyptian is a dialect of arabic spoken by 85 million people who are spread along a narrow strip of land beside 1500km of the river Nile. Egyptian arabic is a living, ever-changing language; it's not taught in schools and it's rarely written down.

As a result, there are considerable variations in vocabulary and pronunciation. Let's not talk about spelling :-/. The details in this dictionary have been checked and cross-checked, but there will always be mistakes and inconsistencies.

The dictionary is supplied 'as is': you are welcome to use it on condition that you do not hold me responsible for any loss, injury or embarrassment that may result from its use.
